A meaningful golf tournament to raise funds for children

SINGAPORE – What could be better than hitting the green with your golfing buddy? How about doing it in support of a worthy cause?

The OCBC-TODAY Children's Fund is hosting a charity golf event at the Sentosa Golf Club's Serapong Course on Oct 3 to raise funds for the Singapore Children's Society. The fund helps children from distressed families rebuild their lives through counselling, mentoring and therapy.

The OCBC-TODAY Charity Golf 2014 has garnered a lot of support from companies that have snapped up all the available flights in the tournament. One company which has stepped forward and contributed S$5,888 for a flight is Times Printers, one of the largest commercial printers in the Asia-Pacific region.

Ms Patsy Tan, deputy general manager of group sales and marketing at Times Printers, said: "This is an opportunity for us as partners to show support for TODAY, a MediaCorp publication. More importantly, we strongly believe that we are supporting a worthy cause."

As part of its corporate social responsibility efforts, Times Printers actively looks into streamlining its internal work processes to reduce waste and enhance its productivity to conserve the environment.

Times Printers also supports other charity events annually. But the OCBC-TODAY Children's Fund stood out because it is dedicated to helping distressed children.

Ms Tan said: "The children are our future. The OCBC-TODAY Children's Fund is doing an excellent job not just in the programmes it supports to help these children but also in creating awareness. It is definitely a worthy cause as children, regardless of their background, should be given equal opportunities and a suitable environment to feel loved."

An avid golfer herself, Ms Tan will be playing in the golf tournament and inviting her clients who are also golfers to join her.

She said: "This presents a good opportunity for us to catch up in a relaxed environment. By inviting clients, Times Printers will do its small part in creating awareness for a noble charity."
