

“ TODAY and OCBC started this fund a year ago because we saw the need to look beyond meeting the children’s basic needs, to focus on their mental health and self-esteem. We are pleased to see so many children from broken homes benefiting from the fund within one year

Koh Ching Ching
HEAD, GROUP CORPORATE COMMUNICATIONS, OCBC BANK

“ We are happy to lend TODAY’s name to support and highlight the plight of the children and teens from broken homes, and to raise funds for therapy aimed at lifting their spirit and morale, their sense of self-worth and empowerment.

Debra Soon
MANAGING DIRECTOR, CHANNEL NEWSASIA

“ As a charity organisation, our work will never be finished. There will always be a need to expand our services to cater to the changing and more complex needs of disadvantaged children in Singapore.

Koh Choon Hui
CHAIRMAN, SCS

Dr Carol Balhetchet, senior director at Singapore Children’s Society, Youth Service Centre (Toa Payoh).

The Rabin family at the open play area at Sunbeam Place. The home has programmes like life skills workshops, bonding activities and community involvement projects to help the children learn resilience, responsibility and respect.

What started as a birthday party turned into a meaningful project to help raise funds. Young Mirabelle and Antoinette Low (above), along with their parents and friends, raised S$3,988 for the OCBC-TODAY Children’s Fund by auctioning off homemade cupcakes. With OCBC pledging S$1 for every S$2 contributed, they raised a total of S$5,982 for the fund.

Children at KidzREACH playing a game to help build up their resilience.

From left: Muhd Afi Hidayat and Mohamed Razlee honed their respective passion for hip-hop dance and music at RoundBox.

Assistant director and head of the Student Care Centre, Ms Samantha Lim, with two of the children who visit the centre.